1. Three hundred thousand civilian laborers are constructing defense works in Manchuria. These defense works are concentrated on top of the Wulungneishan (五龍背山) at Pengch'eng (124-05, 40-28) and extend along the highway to Chuangho (123-03, 39-42). The laborers are constructing artillery positions in the hilly regions and reconditioning strong points previously built by Nationalist forces.
2. In addition to the defenses above, a second line of defense work is being built. It extends from the hilly regions south of Liaoyang (123-12, 41-16) through Pench'i (123-13, 41-20) to and around the outskirts of Mukden. Large quantities of lumber, steel rails, straw and cement are stored in nearby areas.
